

Create Scoreboard Data Accountability

Is your performance data always up-to-date? Who is responsible for the data?

Do you ever walk up to a metric board and find that data is missing or out of date? For a leaders, performance data is critical to their ability to solve problems. Without it how do you know if something is normal or abnormal.

An easy tip to help ensure that your data is properly updated is to add the name and photo of the person responsible for the board directly at the point use. You will be amazed how diligently team members will keep the information current. The last thing they will want is to get that call or visit from a department head looking for updates. This is also a helpful tool for someone with questions. They will know immediately where to go for answers.
